

Maritime Trip Day 23 September 14, 2010 47degrees F, sunny and no wind!

We slept in today as it was to be a short travel day. Although it is colder, it is sunny and pleasant with no wind blowing. Bill returned our rental car and we had a late breakfast at the camper. We pulled out about 10:30 and drove 3 hours to Scotia Pine Campground in Truro, NS. It was time for a light lunch at the campground. Wayne's camper always draw attention with lookey-lou's. An English couple touring the US & Canada stopped by to chat. Always interesting to hear other's stories!

We are near the Tidal Bore—a place where the Bay of Fundy narrows rapidly so the tide comes in so fast that it creates a wave and a wushing sound as it raises the water level about 12 feet in a matter of minutes.. It was pretty amazing! I hope that the photos and video of it will make it clear just how unusual this act of nature is.

We then ate dinner at the Palliser Restaurant next to the Tidal Bore with a window view looking out at the Bay where the tide continued to come in. They were having a 40% off sale in the gift shop, so we had to do our share to help the economy here in Nova Scotia. We continued helping the economy by shopping at a Canadian Tire (like a K-Mart or regular Wal-Mart without groceries) and a Sobey's Grocery Store.

Back at the campground we called it a night.
