

Maritime Trip Day 33 September 24, 2010 60 degrees F, Raining

It started raining in the middle of the night and continued until 11:00 am. We drove to a local Farmer's Market in Southwest Harbor, a community a short distance from the campground. It was a small gathering but we visited with a local cranberry grower who explained the picking process and the storage of fresh cranberries. There was also a very talkative, young red-headed farmer who grew heirloom tomatoes, garlic, greens, carrots, beets and cucumbers. For $15.00, I got $20.00 worth of goods! The bakery booth was a big hit—especially the homemade bread. We also shopped a local shop called Sawyer's—a high-end small grocery store.

Onward to downtown Bar Harbor (Ba Haaaaba) for more shopping and a great lunch at Geddy's for 3 of us while Wayne went to look at a Hinckley Boat. Our favorite was a great kitchen/cooking/decorating store! We bought 2 new throw pillows for the camper. It looks like a totally new place now!! It rained most of the afternoon.

Back at the campground, again, Wayne started preparing some of the fresh food for 'greens & beans with pasta'. We'll have it tomorrow night. Tonight we snacked on cheese, crackers, fresh smoked salmon from St. Andrews, pickled beets from a roadside stand, olives, and tomato salad along with margaritas---followed by tea and an apple tart from the market ! Delicious!
